Maryland Institute for Technology in the Humanities (MITH) is creating a new living learning honors program in Digital Cultures and the Humanities. As part of that effort, they want to work with CS who will teach a couple of courses in this program. The program is expected to have 70 students per year in a two-year program (i.e. 140 students steady state). CS has offered to teach sections of CMSC122 and CMSC198K (the new Great Ideas in CS class) as part of this. The initial plan is to offer the CMSC122 section in fall 2010 and the CMSC198K class in Spring 2011.
